Money matters to farmers

At a time when farm net income is declining money does matter, and this year the theme for the Farm Business Management Seminar to be held during Farmers' Week is "Money Matters."

It does not make any difference whether you are a dairy, beef or cash crop farmer, you should try to attend this seminar. The topics being addressed at the seminar are current and of importance to those farmers who will be making future investment decisions.

The seminar will be held at the WB George Centre, Kempenville College of Agricultural Technology on Feb 12th, beginning at 9:30 am.

The topics to be discussed and the speakers are as follows:

Ken Tammadge, CA, Ward Mallette, Nepean will address current matters pertaining to 1985 Farm Income Tax.

Ian Clark, School of Agriculture, Economics and Extension Education, University of Guelph will address Debt and Equity Levels of the Dairy Farm in the Future.

Richard Kang, policy advisor, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Toronto will address the Effects of Free Trade with the United States on Ontario agriculture.

The final speaker, Bridgid Pyke, first vice president, Ontario Federation of Agriculture will address the prospects for success in agriculture.

Seniors entertain in Pakenham

St. Andrew's United Church Pakenham, provided the setting for the senior citizens choir presentation of the pageant, "No Vacancy," on Dec 22 at 7:30 pm. The scene was the Bethlehem Inn. The walkers entered in three groups singing as they walked. "On the way to Bethlehem, old Herod's taxes there to pay, We're so tired of walking, walking, looking for a place to stay."

The second group entered singing, "I've got sore feet, now I need some sleep, somewhere there must be food and room for me."

The third group, younger and more active, spied a place to stay as they sang — "Hey, here's a place that's just what we need, let's see if food and lodging can be had. Oh yes we've found a place to stay, Oh joy how lucky can we be!" All were registered at the inn and the "No Vacancy" sign was put up. But in spite of that, two more people rushed in while the innkeeper's back was turned.

The wife of the innkeeper was ably played by Millie Lowe who complained about being so busy, and all she heard were complaints. She sang the solo part of "At Bethlehem Inn, there's no vacancy." The innkeeper, played by Lois Ashton, answered a knock at the door. It was a young couple looking for, and needing very urgently, a place to spend the night. After many thoughts on how to accommodate them, they were finally offered a place in the stable — it was warm and comfortable. Then he was greatly concerned about what his wife would say — "that's the story of my life."

"Please don't tell my wife" and the innkeeper sang the solo "Don't tell my wife" assisted in parts by Helen Melville and the choir.

Finally his wife found out the true story and was much concerned. It would affect all the animals; the cows wouldn't milk, the chickens wouldn't lay and the sheep would be upset. The two travellers who had sneaked in came forward in opposition. These parts were played by Mary Scott and Esther Timmins. Mary sang a solo, "I don't like people who are different," and Esther had a speaking part, saying, "We don't know anything about them, they don't live in our town, have peculiar manners and ways; why can't all people be perfectly normal like me?"

Finally the innkeeper's wife found out the real reason about the young couple; they were expecting a baby. Her manner changed immediately and she sat down and cradled an imaginary baby in her arms, while Theresa Stanton sweetly sang, "A Baby is a Miracle," and the choir joined in at the end.

Then the innkeeper heard a baby's cry, and everyone got excited — a bright light shone over the stable. The choir stood and moved toward the stable, and the shepherds played by Grant and Thelma Anderson, appeared saying the most wonderful thing had happened, God's promise has been fulfilled, the Saviour who is Christ the Lord has been born tonight in Bethlehem.

They moved to the manger while three sages entered carrying gifts for the Christ child and each repeated a verse of scripture that prophesied the birth of the Baby Jesus. The sages were played by Beverly Humphries, Julie Timmins and Jerrilyn Dennis.

The innkeepers moved to the manger and in conversation were so happy they had made room for the strangers and by so doing God's word had come to pass.

The choir was all grouped around the manger singing the final song of the evening — "Make room in your heart," repeating it in two parts. One group sang Silent Night and the other group sang, "Make room in your heart." This was a very fitting ending.

Grant Anderson, president of the club, had introduced the pageant at the end and thanked Mrs Pugh who had put much time and effort into the preparation of the pageant. She also thanked Mrs Cochran who was the accompanist and had a very important role.

Several Christmas carols were sung by everyone to end a very meaningful Christmas story.
